Competition:
Envy, Establishing Borders and How to Handle it

Objective

The scientific culture is also driven by competition.
- How does it change behavior from teamwork to building walls?
- How can you recognize the symptoms?
- How can you protect yourself from being exploited?
- How can you counter the destructive force of competition?

This workshop will try to answer these questions. It will try to give you a deeper and new understanding. And it will encourage you to find a constructive strategy.

Description

Life is highly competitive when you start your career. The closer you get to finish your academic exams, the more you will see signs of competitive behavior. Trusted people might start to act like enemies. Someone changes from an open book to hiding information. Others start using your ideas to stand in the spotlight. You might even discover yourself slowing down teamwork.

Methodology

This is not a lecture. Your personal experience will connect to the experience of your facilitator. Inputs will add to interactive discussions. Fighting competition is a serious project and can be fun.
