

International Visiting Fellowships 2024

Goethe University and Johanna Quandt Young Academy @Goethe (JQYA) are offering International Visiting Research Fellowships in 2024.

The JQYA provides a platform for interdisciplinary discourse among outstanding early career researchers. It not only supports researchers financially, but offers diverse opportunities to develop and shape their unique, independent academic profile in a global context. By facilitating freedom for scientific research, the Young Academy significantly supports effective career development in the R3 phase, bundles scientific potential for future academic leadership, and contributes to the (further) development of excellence at Goethe University.

We intend to inspire outstanding international researchers with an established scientific reputation to join the Academy. In particular, we address junior research group leaders and advanced postdocs who have been awarded highly competitive third-party funding and who are considering setting up their own research group at Goethe University, within the Rhine-Main University Alliance, or at other international universities in close collaboration with Goethe University.
